

An Independent Man The Autobiography

Soladle Lu - an ordinary oriental, an author of several extraordinary books. Is he an independent thinker, or only a misfit? From this book, his own sketch book, you may find the answer for yourself. People gloat that "philosophy is dead", but he is sparing no effort to revive it, and successfully so. In the rush to pay tribute and lay flowers before scientists, man has overreached his capacity to build a new kingdom of science to replace the old one. The world has moved towards nihilism, vulgarity and mediocrity, while Soladle Lu continues to devote himself to the creation of beauty and goodness. The world has entered an age of entertainment and amusement, and he continues to sing the praises of the sublime, the greatness and the eternity. In defiance of the shadow of doom everywhere, he is committed to writing our way towards the ideal world. Here he points out that it isn't knowledge but wisdom that offers the broadest avenue for mankind, and the power of beauty and goodness it provides is invincible. The hugely entertaining, and extremely candid, autobiography of one of the most colourful characters in motor sport Eddie Jordan gave Michael Schumacher his first drive, and helped groom a whole series of drivers early in their careers, including Damon Hill and Martin Brundle. But he funded his first move into motor sport by selling smoked salmon well past its sell-by date to rugby fans leaving Lansdowne Road; when stopped for speeding by a policeman, he ended up selling him his car. Jordan set up his own team, and moved into Formula One at the end of the 1980s. It wasn't long before the team began to pick up podium finishes, and in 1998 won its first race - a remarkable achievement on a comparatively small budget. The following year was even better, but sadly this was to be the peak, as the search for more finance and legal battles with sponsors hit hard. Eventually, in January 2005 he sold the team. AN INDEPENDENT MAN goes behind the scenes to reveal the true personalities of the drivers Jordan worked with, and his battles with Bernie Ecclestone. It shows how, when so much money is involved, nothing is ever simple. His has been a life lived to the full, and his account is packed full of superb stories, colourful adventures and revealing tales.

An ordinary man puts his life out there.

History, Historians, and Autobiography

Take Me Home

Autobiography of William H. Seward, from 1801 to 1834

With a Memoir of His Life, and Selections from His Letters from 1831 to 1846

The Autobiography of Edith Guerrier

The only book-length biography of a major Michigan figure who served as Detroit's mayor and contributed to the early success of the Ford Motor Company. Across history, the ideas and practices of male identity have varied much between time and place: masculinity proves to be a slippery concept, not available to all men, sometimes even applied to women. This book analyses the dynamics of 'masculinity' as both an ideology and lived experience - how men have tried, and failed, to be 'Real Men'. Carol Tyler has been a professional (and highly acclaimed) cartoonist for over 20 years, appearing in such venues as Weirdo, Wimmen's Comix, and Drawn & Quarterly magazine. But over the years her status as a working mother has drastically curtailed her ability to set aside time for her cartooning. Thus each rare new story from her pen has been greeted with hurrahs as well they should be, because she's one of the most skillful, caustic, and emphatic cartoon storytellers of her generation. This new book presents the biggest, richest and most delightful collection of Tyler's work to date featuring many new and previously unpublished works. p.p1 {margin: 0.0px 0.0px 0.0px 0.0px; font: 13.9px Arial; color: #424242}

A Disabled Man's Quest for Independence

Late Bloomer

An Independent Scholar in Twentieth Century America

Autobiography

An Autobiography

A Fictional Account of a Young Biracial Man

Born in a log cabin on a Texas prairie in 1890, T. V. Smith—distinguished philosopher, teacher, politician, lecturer, and editor—left an imprint on the twentieth century seldom equaled by a university professor. Simply listing his activities reveals the versatility of this extraordinary man. He held posts as professor at Texas Christian University and the University of Texas, as professor and dean at the University of Chicago for a quarter-century, and as professor of citizenship and philosophy at Syracuse University for eight years. An independent Democrat, he spent four years in the Illinois State Senate before being elected to the U.S. House of Representatives as congressman at large from Illinois. He served as private ("no class") in World War I; he held the rank of colonel in World War II and was a military governor with the Allied Control Commission in Sicily and Italy, was Director of Democratization for Select German Prisoners of War, and was a member of the U.S. Education Mission to Germany and Japan. As a founder of the Chicago Round Table of the Air and one of its most frequent participants, he became one of radio's best-known personalities. He was editor of the International Journal of Ethics, and his democratic wisdom has found expression in more than twenty books and in hundreds of articles. In open forum he often tilted with such opponents as Robert A. Taft, Clarence Darrow, Harry Gideonse, Will Durant, and Norman Thomas. He was an orator of national renown. He held seven degrees from as many institutions. A maverick, intellectual as well as political, Smith never feared to strike off the shackles of conventionality and dogma when they hampered his search for truth, and his stout conscience challenged all comers. Long involvement with people of many ideas, backgrounds, and interests so permeated his thinking that his message was to and for all of America. He spoke of actual situations that affect actual human beings, illuminating his impressions with sensitivity and understanding. T. V. Smith's story has heart and vision. It manifests, in approximately equal portions, poetic imagination, resourcefulness, limitless energy, public service, and pride. Early in life Smith set his heart not on accumulating material possessions but on discovering how men and women of every station and degree can have the blessing of a sane and reasonable life in an increasingly complex society. What he says here is witty and wise, "nuggets mined from the hills of life . . . the living stuff of biography, the inner essence which transcends the world of fact." In such a record lies democracy's best boast.

Warren is getting on in years, and sadly, most of my old friends have passed on, but a new generation of young, strong linemen are taking our place and perhaps, if my book amuses you, I could count you among my friends. I'm sure when you read of my life and exploits, you will see that I probably was a bit different from the rest of the crowd, but I put some advice in here for you youngsters and know that I wish you well, as you do the work I loved and still dream about almost every night.

93 years old man's memoir. His memory is as clear as a young man. Blind Man's Bluff

A Non-Existent Man

Historical Dynamics from Antiquity to the Contemporary World

Autobiography of the First Forty-one Years of the Life of Sylvanus Cobb, D.D.

Autobiography. Memoir. The Christian ministry

The Independent

A History of Irish Autobiography is the first ever critical survey of autobiographical self-representation in Ireland from its recoverable beginnings to the twenty-first century. The book draws on a wealth of original scholarship by leading experts to provide an authoritative examination of autobiographical writing in the English and Irish languages. Beginning with a comprehensive overview of autobiography theory and criticism in Ireland, the History guides the reader through seventeen centuries of Irish achievement in autobiography, a category that incorporates diverse literary forms, from religious tracts and travelogues to letters, diaries, and online journals. This ambitious book is rich in insight. Chapters are structured around key subgenres, themes, texts, and practitioners, each featuring a guide to recommended further reading. The volume's extensive coverage is complemented by a detailed chronology of Irish autobiography from the fifth century to the contemporary era, the first of its kind to be published.

In Malamute Man: Memoirs of an Arctic Traveler, Joe Henderson, who came to Alaska in search of adventure, finds himself on a remarkable journey exploring the Arctic with his Alaskan malamute sled dog team. He ventures into one of the most brutal environments on earth where extreme subzero temperatures are a constant reminder of mortality, and the will to survive is unselfishly shared by both man and dog. Together, they must fend off charging grizzly bears, endure powerful blizzards, and suffer the horror of plunging through thin ice. Joe's gripping tales of perseverance and his fearless, free-spirited dogs are both humorous and astonishing.

Though history and autobiography both claim to tell true stories about the past, historians have traditionally rejected first-person accounts as subjective and therefore unreliable. What then, asks Jeremy D. Popkin in History, Historians, and Autobiography, are we to make of the ever-increasing number of professional historians who are publishing stories of their own lives? And how is this recent development changing the nature of history-writing, the historical profession, and the genre of autobiography? Drawing on the theoretical work of contemporary critics of autobiography and the philosophy of Paul Ricoeur, Popkin reads the autobiographical classics of Edward Gibbon and Henry Adams and the memoirs of contemporary historians such as Emmanuel Le Roy Ladurie, Peter Gay, Jill Ker Conway, and many others, he reveals the contributions historians' life stories make to our understanding of the human experience. Historians' autobiographies, he shows, reveal how scholars arrive at their vocations, the difficulties of writing about modern professional life, and the ways in which personal stories can add to our understanding of historical events such as war, political movements, and the traumas of the Holocaust. An engrossing overview of the way historians view themselves and their profession, this work will be of interest to readers concerned with the ways in which we understand the past, as well as anyone interested in the art of life-writing.

Autobiography Life and Mystical Experience of Rainbow Man

Biographies of Distinguished Scientific Men: The history of my youth, an autobiography of Francis Arago. Bailly. Herschel. Laplace. Joseph Fourier. -ser. 2 Carnot. Malus. Fresnel. Thomas Young. James Watt

The Life of Senator James Couzens

Malamute Man

A Memoir

The Autobiography of Vaughn Davis Bornet

This Generation Study, from one born in 1917 who lived productively in our century, defies disgruntled figures who say they "can't wait for it to end." Scholarly author, history professor, college administrator, four-year WWII Navy veteran, & researcher-editor for RAND, Encyclopedia Britannica, American Medical Association, Commonwealth Club of California, Bornet addresses seniors & youth alike. Raised in a Bala-Cynwyd, Pennsylvania family in the 1920s, he helped support parents in then seedy Art Deco Miami Beach after they were cleaned out by an "Avenging Sheriff." The Emory & Stanford trained historian rebelled fiercely against work in "organization man" environments. He authored books on Herbert Hoover & LBJ presidencies; trade unions, communism & socialism; & three on social welfare. Unlike his third person memoir-writing models Henry Adams & Lincoln Steffens, the author describes family leisure activities. His Quaker-initiated but non-denominational religious orientation gets introspective analysis. "No Holds Barred in the Academic Jungle" candidly recounts an insider's perspective on faculty vs. administration. Bornet, a moderate Republican, lived no ivory tower life at University of Miami or Southern Oregon State College! He applauds volunteering. This calm life & times memoir is for seniors, vocation-selecting or life-apprehending students, & Popular Culture historians. "Altogether, it's a mammoth work, with lots of meat."--Medford (OR) Mail Tribune. To order contact: Bornet Books, P.O. Box 331, Talent, OR 97540. 541-482-2228.

*In September 1955 six-year-old Mark O'Brien moved his arms and legs for the last time. He came out of a coma to find himself enclosed from the neck down in an iron lung, the machine in which he would live for much of the rest of his life. For the first time in paperback, How I Became a Human Being is O'Brien's account of his struggles to* lead an independent life despite a lifelong disability. In 1955 he contracted polio and became permanently paralyzed from the neck down. O'Brien describes growing up without the use of his limbs, his adolescence struggling with physical rehabilitation and suffering the bureaucracy of hospitals and institutions, and his adult life as an independent student and writer. Despite his physical limitations, O'Brien crafts a narrative that is as rich and vivid as the life he led. A writer's humorous and often-heartbreaking tale of losing his sight--and how he hid it from the world.

An Independent Thinker Growing in Shells

Annie Besant

Who, Me?

Autobiography of an Ordinary Man

Memoir of the Rev. W. H. Hewitson

An Independent Man

Details the life of the turn-of-the-century woman who pursued a career in librarianship, started several girls' clubs, and co-founded Paul Revere Pottery.

The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man by James Weldon Johnson is the fictional telling of the story of a young biracial man, referred to only as the "Ex-Colored Man", living in post Reconstruction era America in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. The Ex-Colored Man was forced to choose between embracing his black heritage and culture by expressing himself through the African-American musical genre ragtime, or by "passing" and living obscurely as a mediocre middle-class white man. The Ex-Colored man living in an all black community discovered three classes of blacks; the desperate class, the domestic service class, and the independent workman. Johnson originally wrote The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man anonymously in 1912 by the small New York publisher Sherman, French, and Company. Brandon's decision to publish the novel anonymously stemmed in part from his sense that signing his name to a potentially controversial book might damage his diplomatic career.

The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man James Weldon Johnson 1912 The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man (1912/1927) by James Weldon Johnson is the fictional account of a young biracial man, referred to only as the "Ex-Colored Man", living in post-Reconstruction era America in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. He lives through a variety of experiences, including witnessing a lynching, that convince him to "pass" as white to secure his safety and advancement, but he feels as if he has given up his dream of "glorifying" the black race by composing ragtime music. The Ex-Colored Man's mother protected him as a child and teenager. Because of the money provided by his father, she had the means to raise him in an environment more middle-class than many blacks could enjoy at the time. After the boy's mother dies, he is a poor orphan and subject to harsh conditions. He adapted very well to life with lower-class blacks, and was able to move easily among the classes of black society. During this carefree period, he taught music and attended church, where he came in contact with upper-class blacks. Living in an all black community, he discovers and describes three classes of blacks: the desperate, domestic service, and the independent workman or professional. The Ex-Colored Man believed the desperate class consists of poor blacks who loathe the whites. The domestic worker class work as servants to whites. Artisans and skilled workers, as well as black professionals, had little interaction with the whites. Many white readers, who viewed all blacks as a stereotype of a single class, were unfamiliar with class distinctions described among blacks.

Man Tracks

The Autobiography

Together with a Summary of the Chief Events in Jefferson's Life

Memoir of the Rev. W.H. Hewitson, late ministre of the Free Church of Scotland, at Dirleton

Beyond 90

From Shy To Social: The Shy Man's Guide to Personal & Dating Success

The early life, childhood, and experiences that led to a mystical experience and transformation of an ordinary man.

Autobiographical writings have been a major cultural genre from antiquity to the present time. General questions of the literary as, e.g., the relation between literature and reality, truth and fiction, the dependency of author, narrator, and figure, or issues of individual and cultural styles etc., can be studied preeminently in the autobiographical genre. Yet, the tradition of life-writing has, in the course of literary history, developed manifold types and forms. Especially in the globalized age, where the media and other technological / cultural factors contribute to a rapid transformation of lifestyles, autobiographical writing has maintained, even enhanced, its popularity and importance. By conceiving autobiography in a wide sense that includes memoirs, diaries, self-portraits and autofiction as well as media transformations of the genre, this three-volume handbook offers a comprehensive survey of theoretical approaches, systematic aspects, and historical developments in an international and interdisciplinary perspective. While autobiography is usually considered to be a European tradition, special emphasis is placed on the modes of self-representation in non-Western cultures and on inter- and transcultural perspectives of the genre. The individual contributions are closely interconnected by a system of cross-references. The handbook addresses scholars of cultural and literary studies, students as well as non-academic readers.

Contains nearly two hundred alphabetically arranged entries that provide information on women's autobiography, covering selected authors from throughout history, major works, nationalities or ethnicities, and related issues, themes, and terms.

A Collection of the Most Instructive and Amusing Lives Ever Published

Independent Man

Handbook of Autobiography / Autofiction

Memoir of Nathanael Emmons

Rainbow Man

An Autobiography, 1834-1858, and a Memoir by His Wife, 1858-1894

Prepared in 1821. Apparently first published in the Memoir, correspondence, and miscellanies, from the papers of Thomas Jefferson, Charlottesville, 1829.

“ Engaging, well-researched and frequently hilarious, From Shy To Social is one of those rare self-help books that feels like you're being coached and encouraged by a trusted friend. An absolute must-read for all of the love shy men out there. ” — Sofi Papamarko, Relationship Columnist & Contributor to The Huffington Post and The Globe & Mail
Keywords: Dating success, relationship advice, pickup artist women dating sex, confidence building presentation, assertiveness training public speaking, improving social skills conversation

John Denver chronicles the experiences that shaped his life, while unraveling the rich, inner journey of a shy Midwestern boy whose uneasy partnership with fame has been one of the defining forces of his first fifty years.

Memoirs of an Arctic Traveler

An Autobiography of an Ordinary Man

To which is Added a Memoir

The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man

What is Masculinity?

Garibaldi: an Autobiography